

Ruby Johnson of Sharkey County has spent most of her life by the Mississippi River. To Ruby, the mighty Mississippi is one of the most beautiful places on Earth.

But, this beautiful river can also turn on you when the floods come. During the spring in the South Delta, as the Mississippi River rises and as the water in the Delta's inland streams and small rivers run over their banks, wildlife, homes, roads and farms are exposed to floods beyond belief, creating severe damage in the South Delta.

However, the Mississippi Levee Board is working hard, each and every day, to ensure that one day these streams and rivers won't flood our people, our homes, our land or our wildlife. But, much more needs to be done so Ruby's home and the homes of many others, remain safe and dry. Sad to say, but there are those who try to stop the Levee Board from doing their job.
